

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8                   UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9                   SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

10
11 GREENFIELD MHP ASSOCIATES,
12 L.P., et al.,

13                   Plaintiffs,

14                   v.

15                   AMETEK, INC., et al.,,

16                   Defendants.

Case No.: 3:15-cv-01525-GPC-AGS

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISQUALIFY

[ECF No. 130]

17                   Before the Court is a motion to disqualify opposing counsel filed by Defendant 18 Ametek, Inc.<sup>1</sup> (ECF No. 130.) Ametek seeks an order disqualifying Baron & Budd P.C.
19 and Gomez Trial Attorneys (collectively, “Plaintiffs’ Counsel”) as counsel to the 20 plaintiffs in this action and three other related federal lawsuits before this Court: Trujillo, 21 et al. v. Ametek, et al. (Case No. 15-cv-1394), Cox, et al. v. Ametek, Inc. et al. (Case No.
22 17-cv-597), and Cox, et al. v. Ametek, Inc. et al. (Case No. 17-cv-1211). The motion is 23 fully briefed. For the reasons explained below, the Court DENIES the motion to 24 disqualify. The Court also DENIES Plaintiffs’ motion for sanctions.

25
26
27
28                   

---

<sup>1</sup> According to the motion, it is also filed by Thomas Deeney, an Ametek officer who is a codefendant in the related cases. Deeney is not a party in this case, but is a defendant in related cases.

1           I. Background

2           In this action, Plaintiffs—owners of three mobile home parks located in El Cajon, 3 California—have brought suit claiming damage to their property as a result of ground 4 contamination. Defendants are Ametek, Inc., a former owner and operator of an aircraft 5 parts manufacturing facility near Plaintiffs’ properties (“The Facility”), and Senior 6 Operations, LLC, the current owner of the facility. In short, Plaintiffs allege that 7 Ametek, while operating The Facility, constructed an underground waste sump, which 8 eventually leaked and produced a chemical plume contaminating nearby soil and 9 groundwater. This contamination is the origin of five lawsuits, four of which are before 10 this Court, and one of which is in state court.

11           On May 29, 2015, students and staff from Magnolia Elementary School 12 (“MES”—which abuts The Facility—filed a putative class action in state court against 13 Ametek, Thomas Deeney (an Ametek officer), and Senior. Trujillo, et al. v. Ametek, Inc., 14 et al., No. 15-cv-01395 (S.D. Cal.). The plaintiffs in Trujillo allege injury as a result of 15 inhaling toxic vapors while on MES property. The defendants removed the case to 16 federal court. The plaintiffs in Trujillo are represented by Baron & Budd, P.C. The case 17 is currently in discovery.

18           Plaintiffs in this case, owners of three nearby mobile home parks—Greenfield, 19 Villa Cajon, and Starlight—filed suit against Ametek and Senior on July 10, 2015. (ECF 20 No. 1.) This is not a class action. Plaintiffs in this case are represented by Baron & Budd 21 and Gomez Trial Attorneys. Defendants in this case have recently filed a motion for 22 summary judgment. (See ECF No. 135.)

23           On January 25, 2017, three residents of the Greenfield park filed suit in state court 24 against Greenfield’s owners. Rossiter, et al. v. Greenfield MHP, et al., No. 37-2017-25 3143-CU-PO-CTL (Cal. Super. Ct.). According to the electronic state court docket—of 26 which this Court may take judicial notice, see, e.g., Williams v. Los Angeles Cty. Super.
27 Ct., No. CV 08-4823-TJH (MAN), 2009 WL 73732, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2009)—it 28 appears that the plaintiffs in Rossiter are represented by the Gilleon Law Firm, and the

1 Greenfield owners are represented by Cooksey Toolen Gage Duffy & Woog. The 2 defendants in Rossiter have filed a third-party complaint against Ametek and Senior. No 3 one in this case suggests that Baron & Budd or Gomez Trial Attorneys are involved in the 4 Rossiter lawsuit. According to Ametek, the plaintiffs in Rossiter claim that the 5 Greenfield owners failed to warn its residents about the plume contaminating the park 6 property.

7 On March 24, 2017, residents of the three mobile home parks filed a putative class 8 action in this Court against Ametek, Deeney, and Senior. Cox, et al. v. Ametek, Inc., et 9 al., No. 17-cv-597 (S.D. Cal) (Cox I). In Cox I, the plaintiffs allege that they have been 10 injured as a result of inhaling toxic vapors stemming from the contamination of the soil 11 and groundwater at the mobile home parks. The plaintiffs are represented by Baron & 12 Budd. On June 20, 2017, the defendants in Cox I filed third-party complaints against the 13 mobile home park owners, seeking indemnity as a result of the park owners' alleged 14 failure to warn their residents about the contamination of the park properties. In October 15 2017, this Court denied several motions to dismiss the third-party complaints. (See No.
16 17-cv-597, ECF No. 59.)

17 Finally, on June 14, 2017, three sons of a deceased resident of the Villa Cajon park 18 filed suit in this Court against Ametek and Deeney.<sup>2</sup> Cox, et al. v. Ametek, Inc., et al., 19 No. 17-cv-1211 (S.D. Cal.) (Cox II). Cox II is not a class action. There, the plaintiffs 20 claim wrongful death against the defendants, alleging that the contamination in the 21 mobile home parks caused their mother's death. The Cox II plaintiffs are represented by 22 Baron & Budd.

23 II. Legal Standard

24 "The disqualification of counsel because of an ethical violation is a discretionary 25 exercise of the trial court's inherent powers." Crenshaw v. MONY Life Ins. Co., 318 F.
26

---

27
28 <sup>2</sup> The plaintiffs in Cox II later amended their complaint to add Senior as a defendant.

1 Supp. 2d 1015, 1020 (S.D. Cal. 2004). When considering the merits of the claim of a 2 violation of ethical rules, this Court considers California law. See In re Cty. of Los 3 Angeles, 223 F.3d 990, 995 (9th Cir. 2000). The Court is well aware, however, that a 4 motion for “disqualification is a drastic measure that is disfavored . . . [b]ecause [it is] 5 often tactically motivated.” Crenshaw, 318 F. Supp.2d at 1020. “Because of this 6 potential for abuse, disqualification motions should be subjected to particularly strict 7 judicial scrutiny.” Optyl Eyewear Fashion Int'l Corp. v. Style Cos., 760 F.2d 1045, 1050 8 (9th Cir. 1985) (internal quotation marks omitted).

9 III. Discussion

10 Ametek contends that Plaintiffs’ Counsel must be disqualified from representing 11 any of the plaintiffs in the four federal lawsuits because there is a concurrent conflict of 12 interest. The mobile home park residents and owners have adverse interests, according to 13 Ametek, because—as suggested by the Rossiter state court suit and the defendants’ 14 indemnity claims in Greenfield—the mobile home park residents have viable claims 15 against the park owners for the owners’ alleged failure to warn the residents about the 16 plume’s contamination of the park properties.

17 As explained below, both parties erroneously assume that Ametek must 18 demonstrate Article III standing for the Court to consider the disqualification motion. In 19 light of the totality of the circumstances of this case, however, the Court finds that 20 disqualification is inappropriate.

21 A. Standing

22 The parties appear to agree that this standing issue is governed by Article III of the 23 United States Constitution. In other words, the parties assume that, to seek 24 disqualification of another party’s counsel on the basis of a violation of an applicable 25 ethical rule, a moving party must satisfy the elements of Article III standing with respect 26 to the disqualification sought. The parties disagree as to whether Ametek can 27 demonstrate Article III standing with respect to the alleged conflict of interest at issue 28 here. Ametek argues it has standing to move for disqualification in these cases because 1 so long as Plaintiffs' Counsel represent the park residents and park owners, there is an 2 ever present threat that whatever final judgment or settlement is reached will be 3 invalidated by an appeal on the ground of Plaintiffs' Counsel's conflict of interest.

4 Plaintiffs respond by arguing that this risk is neither an "actual or imminent" injury, 5 which a party must establish to assert Article III standing. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 6 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). The Court, however, need not address this issue because the 7 Court finds that it possesses the power to consider and decide the motion for 8 disqualification by virtue of its inherent power to preserve the integrity of the adversary 9 process.

10 "Article III of the Constitution limits the judicial power of the United States to the 11 resolution of 'Cases' and 'Controversies,' and Article III standing . . . enforces the 12 Constitution's case-or-controversy requirement." Hein v. Freedom From Religion 13 Found., Inc., 551 U.S. 587, 597–98 (2007) (internal quotation marks omitted). This 14 limitation is one of subject-matter jurisdiction, i.e., a court's power to adjudicate a legal 15 dispute and provide appropriate relief. See Maya v. Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060, 1067 16 (9th Cir. 2011) ("[L]ack of Article III standing requires dismissal for lack of subject 17 matter jurisdiction under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1)." (emphasis omitted)); 18 see also Lightfoot v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 137 S. Ct. 553, 560 (2017) ("A court of 19 competent jurisdiction is a court with the power to adjudicate the case before it. And a 20 court's subject-matter jurisdiction defines its power to hear cases." (citation omitted)).
21 Article III standing limits federal courts' subject-matter jurisdiction to cases in which the 22 party invoking the court's jurisdiction can demonstrate a "personal injury fairly traceable 23 to the defendant's allegedly unlawful conduct and likely to be redressed by the requested 24 relief." Hein, 551 U.S. at 598 (quoting Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 751 (1984)).
25 While the doctrine of Article III standing requires a court to consider the relationship 26 between the parties, the doctrine is ultimately a limitation on the court's power. See 27 Allen, 468 U.S. at 750 ("The Art. III doctrine that requires a litigant to have 'standing' to 28 invoke the power of a federal court is perhaps the most important of [the Article III]

1 doctrines.” (emphasis added)).

2 Considering this nature of the Article III standing doctrine, it makes little sense to 3 apply its requirements to a party seeking disqualification of another party’s counsel. This 4 Court possesses an inherent power to disqualify attorneys appearing before it. See, e.g., 5 United States v. Prevezon Holdings Ltd., 839 F.3d 227, 241 (2d Cir. 2016) (“The 6 authority of federal courts to disqualify attorneys derives from their inherent power to 7 preserve the integrity of the adversary process.”); Crenshaw v. MONY Life Ins. Co., 318 8 F. Supp. 2d 1015, 1020 (S.D. Cal. 2004) (“The disqualification of counsel because of an 9 ethical violation is a discretionary exercise of the trial court’s inherent powers.”); Visa 10 U.S.A., Inc. v. First Data Corp., 241 F. Supp. 2d 1100, 1103 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (“The right 11 to disqualify counsel is within the discretion of the trial court as an exercise of its 12 inherent powers.”); Multimedia Patent Trust v. Apple Inc., No. 10-cv-2618-H-CAB, 2011
13 WL 163928, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2011) (same). Notably, that power is one the Court 14 can invoke sua sponte. See, e.g., State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Drobot, 192 F. Supp.
15 3d 1080, 1090 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (noting that even if the movant lacked standing to move 16 for disqualification, “[t]he Court would [honor its obligation to manage the conduct of 17 attorneys] by raising the disqualification issue on its own when it found out about the 18 conflict”). The fact that the Court possesses an inherent power to disqualify Plaintiffs’ 19 Counsel sua sponte requires the conclusion that Article III has conferred that power 20 regardless of how the ethical violation comes to the Court’s attention. *See Erickson v.
21 NewMar Corp.*, 87 F.3d 298, 303 (9th Cir. 1996) (“Whenever an allegation is made that 22 an attorney has violated his moral and ethical responsibility . . . [i]t is the duty of the 23 district court to examine the charge, since it is that court which is authorized to supervise 24 the conduct of the members of its bar.” (quoting Gas-A-Tron of Ariz. v. Union Oil Co., 25 534 F.2d 1322 (9th Cir. 1976)).

26 Put differently, if Article III’s standing limitations applied to a disqualification 27 motion, the result would be illogical: a court could disqualify an attorney sua sponte, but 28 might not be able to grant a motion to disqualify depending the identity of the movant.

1 Consider a variation of the situation in this case. Assume Plaintiffs' Counsel is engaging 2 in a blatant ethical violation by, say, selling Plaintiffs' confidential communications to 3 unrelated parties. Further assume that this ethical violation does not affect Ametek's 4 interests. If the Court found out about Plaintiffs' Counsel's misdeeds, it would be the 5 Court's duty to examine the conduct for disqualification of counsel and, as stated above, 6 could do so sua sponte pursuant to its inherent authority. But what if Ametek files a 7 motion to disqualify Plaintiffs' Counsel? If Article III standing principles apply, 8 Plaintiffs' Counsel would argue the Court lacks the power to disqualify Plaintiffs' 9 Counsel in response to Ametek's motion. This makes no sense given the Court's 10 inherent power to disqualify Plaintiffs' Counsel.

11       The Ninth Circuit has only briefly addressed this issue in dicta. In Kasza v.
12 Browner, 133 F.3d 1159, 1171 (9th Cir. 1998), the court affirmed the denial of the 13 plaintiff's motion to disqualify defense counsel. While the defendants had not raised the 14 issue of the plaintiff's standing to move for disqualification, the court noted: "We have 15 difficulty seeing how [the plaintiff] has standing to complain about a possible conflict of 16 interest arising out of common representation of defendants in different civil actions, 17 having nothing to do with her own representation. 'As a general rule, courts do not 18 disqualify an attorney on the ground of conflict of interest unless the former client moves 19 for disqualification.'" Id. (quoting United States v. Rogers, 9 F.3d 1025, 1031 (2d Cir.
20 1993)). But the court did not rely on this issue in reaching its decision; it instead held 21 that, assuming that plaintiff had standing to move for disqualification, the denial of the 22 motion was not an abuse of discretion. As a result, the discussion in Kasza quoted above 23 is non-precedential dicta. Cetacean Comm. v. Bush, 386 F.3d 1169, 1173 (9th Cir. 2004) 24 ("A statement is dictum when it is made during the course of delivering a judicial 25 opinion, but . . . is unnecessary to the decision in the case and [is] therefore not 26 precedential." (internal quotation marks omitted)).

27       The Court acknowledges that its conclusion that Article III standing doctrine does 28 not limit disqualification motions directly conflicts with the decision in Colyer v. Smith, 1 50 F. Supp. 2d 966 (C.D. Cal. 1999), and the courts in this circuit that have relied on 2 Colyer's reasoning.<sup>3</sup> There, after a comprehensive review of case law concerning a non-3 client party's standing to seek disqualification of another party's counsel, the court 4 determined that the movant must "establish a personal stake in the motion to disqualify 5 sufficient to satisfy the 'irreducible constitutional minimum' of Article III." Id. at 971.

6 But the Colyer court also acknowledged its own "inherent obligation to manage the 7 conduct of attorneys who appear before it and to ensure the fair administration of 8 justice." Id. at 972. As explained above, if a court has the power to disqualify attorneys 9 before it as the result of an ethical violation, it is irrelevant—for purposes of subject-10 matter jurisdiction—who brings the ethical violation to the Court's attention.

11 The Court also acknowledges that the Eighth Circuit has adopted an Article III-12 oriented view with respect to motions to disqualify, though it appears to be the only 13 federal circuit to do so.<sup>4</sup> In O'Connor v. Jones, the court rejected the plaintiff's argument 14 that "because he has undisputed standing to bring [the underlying lawsuit], he also has 15 standing to raise by motion any issue that may occur to him in the course of the 16 litigation." 946 F.2d 1395, 1399–1400 (8th Cir. 1991). The court explained that Article 17 III standing applies to both disputes and "particular issues" presented to a federal court.
18 Id. at 1400 (quoting Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498 (1975)). Impliedly holding that a 19 motion for disqualification was a "particular issue" to which Article III standing doctrine 20 governed, the court concluded that the plaintiff lacked standing to bring that motion. Id.

---

21
22
23 <sup>3</sup> See, e.g., Kaufmann v. Pima Cty., No. CV 11-534 TUC DCB, 2012 WL 12873766, at *2 (D. Ariz.
24 Sept. 19, 2012); So v. Land Base, LLC, No. CV 08-03336 DDP (AGRx), 2010 WL 3075641, at *2 (C.D.
25 Cal. 2010); Simonca v. Mukasey, No. CIV S-08-1453 FDC GGH, 2008 WL 5113757, at *3–4 (Nov. 25, 2008); Xcentric Ventures, LLC v. Stanley, No. CV-07-00954-PHX-NVW, 2007 WL 2177323, at *2–4
(D. Ariz. July 27, 2007); Decaview Distrib. Co., Inc. v. Decaview Asia Corp., No. C 99-02555 MJJ (ME), 2000 WL 1175583, at *8–10 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2000).

26 <sup>4</sup> The Seventh Circuit has relied on O'Connor to hold that a plaintiff "does not have standing to 27 disqualify the [defense] attorneys because he cannot show that their representation of the county harmed 28 him in any way." Dupree v. Hardy, 859 F.3d 458, 463–64 (7th Cir. 2017); see also Schneider v. Cty. of Will, 123 F. App'x 715, 716–17 (7th Cir. 2005). But those cases do not address the issue of whether this standing limitation derives from Article III.

1        As an initial matter, this Court agrees with the O'Connor court that the plaintiff's 2 argument went too far. The fact that a complaint satisfies the requirements of subject-3 matter jurisdiction does not mean that the court possesses jurisdiction to grant every 4 motion filed in that case. For example, if the plaintiff in O'Connor sought only damages 5 in his complaint, but then filed a motion for preliminary injunction, the plaintiff would 6 have to establish independent standing to request the injunctive relief. See, e.g., 7 Davidson v. Kimberly-Clerk Corp., 873 F.3d 1103, 1113 (9th Cir. 2017). But rejecting 8 the plaintiff's argument in O'Connor does not answer the question of whether Article III 9 governs a motion to disqualify, or in the words used by Warth, whether such a motion is 10 a "particular issue" pertinent to the limits of Article III standing. Because the Eighth 11 Circuit did not address that issue, the opinion is not of much help. If anything, its 12 discussion supports this Court's conclusion. At the beginning of its discussion, the court 13 states: "[i]n cases where counsel is in violation of professional ethics, the court may act 14 on motion of an aggrieved party or may act sua sponte to disqualify." O'Connor, 946 15 F.2d at 1399. That acknowledgement tees up this Court's reasoning above: if the Court 16 can disqualify Plaintiffs' Counsel sua sponte, it must also have the power to grant a 17 motion to disqualify, regardless of which party files the motion.

18        In sum, in the absence of controlling Supreme Court or Ninth Circuit case law 19 stating the contrary, this Court concludes that Article III does not prevent the Court from 20 entertaining and deciding a motion to disqualify counsel. That conclusion, of course, 21 does not require that such a motion be granted.

22              B. Whether Disqualification is Appropriate

23        Having concluded that Article III does not pose a barrier to deciding the instant 24 motion, the Court must consider whether disqualification under these circumstances is 25 appropriate. It is not.

26        "Disqualification proceedings are equitable in nature. For this reason, courts may 27 properly consider the totality of the circumstances, including whether the motion is being 28 brought in bad faith or otherwise for tactical reasons." Sherman v. CLP Res., Inc., No.

CV 12-8080-GW (PLAx), 2015 WL 13542762, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 4, 2015) (citations omitted). Because of the potential for abuse, and in light of the drastic nature of an order of disqualification, courts disfavor motions to disqualify. See, e.g., Reading Int'l, Inc. v. Malulani Grp., Ltd., 814 F.3d 1046, 1053 (9th Cir. 2016) (“We are mindful of the drastic nature of disqualification.”); Cty. of Los Angeles, 223 F.3d at 995 (“A motion to disqualify a law firm can be a powerful litigation tactic to deny an opposing party’s counsel of choice.”); Optyl Eyewear Fashion, 760 F.2d at 1050 (“Because of this potential for abuse, disqualification motions should be subject to particularly strict scrutiny.” (internal quotation marks omitted)); White v. Experian Info. Sols., 993 F. Supp. 2d 1154, 1166 (C.D. Cal. 2014) (“[B]ecause motions to disqualify are often tactically motivated, such motions are strongly disfavored and subject to particularly strict judicial scrutiny.” (internal quotation marks omitted)); see also Richardson-Merrell, Inc. v. Koller, 472 U.S. 424, 436 (1985) (“[W]e share the Court of Appeals’ concern about tactical use of disqualification motions to harass opposing counsel.” (internal quotation marks omitted)). “Because a motion to disqualify a party’s counsel may implicate several important interests, it is important that judges examine such motions carefully, bearing in mind such considerations as a client’s right to chosen counsel, an attorney’s interest in representing a client, the financial burden on a client to replace disqualified counsel, and the possibility that tactical abuse underlies the disqualification motion.” Yumul v. Smart Balance, Inc., No. CV 10-00927 MMM (AJWx), 2010 WL 4352723, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 8, 2010) (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted).

Ametek asserts that Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s representation presents an impermissible concurrent conflict of interest. Under the California ethics rules, “[a] concurrent conflict exists where an attorney represents two or more clients with materially adverse or potentially materially adverse interests at the same time.” Sherman, 2015 WL 13542762 at *5 (citing Cal. R. Prof’l Conduct 3-310(C))). Based on the pleadings in the four federal cases, there is at least a potential conflict of interest in Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s simultaneous representation of the mobile home park residents in Cox I and the owners in

1 this case. As alleged in Ametek’s third-party complaint in this case, as well as 2 (presumably) in the Rossiter action in state court, the residents’ interests are adverse to 3 the mobile home park owners to the extent that the residents can claim injury resulting 4 from the owners’ failure to warn residents about the contamination on the park properties.
5 See Walker v. Apple, Inc., 209 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319, 1110–11 (Ct. App. 2016) (“An 6 ‘adverse’ interest is one that is ‘hostile, opposed, antagonistic . . . , detrimental, [or] 7 unfavorable’ to another’s interest.” (quoting Ames v. State Bar, 506 P.2d 625, 630 (Cal.
8 1973)).

9       Nonetheless, considering the totality of the circumstances in this case and the 10 potential for litigation gamesmanship involved, equity in this case counsels against 11 disqualification of Plaintiffs’ Counsel. As an initial matter, Plaintiffs are correct that any 12 conflict of interest between the mobile home park residents and the park owners does not 13 impact Trujillo and Cox II. The plaintiffs in Trujillo are suing on the basis of their 14 exposure to toxins while on MES property, which was caused by Ametek. There has 15 been no suggestion that the mobile home park owners also own the MES property. Even 16 assuming the park owners failed to warn the park residents of the toxins on the mobile 17 home park properties, that fact has no relevance to the Trujillo plaintiffs’ exposure to 18 toxins while on MES property. Ametek responds to this argument by asserting that some 19 of the students at MES live, or lived, in the mobile home parks. Even if that is true, the 20 compensable damages in Trujillo are based on exposure at MES only, not the mobile 21 home parks. Similarly, the sole claim in Cox II—a wrongful death claim asserted by the 22 sons of a former Villa Cajon mobile home park resident—is irrelevant to the asserted 23 conflict of interest because the decedent in that case passed away before any of the 24 Greenfield plaintiffs came into ownership of the Villa Cajon mobile home park. (ECF 25 No. 145-1 at ¶ 15.)

26       With respect to the conflict arising in Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s representation of the 27 plaintiffs in Greenfield and Cox I, the Court finds the most crucial circumstance here to 28 be the fact that all of the plaintiffs in those cases have signed sworn declarations

1 indicating that they know of the potential conflict, have consulted independent counsel
2 regarding the conflict issue, and still wish to be represented by Plaintiffs' Counsel. (ECF 3 Nos. 145-3, 145-4, 145-5, 145-6, 145-7.) Ametek argues that the declarations are 4 insufficient to protect all of Plaintiffs' Counsel's clients from a conflict because the Court 5 must also consider the interests of the unnamed class members in Cox I, who have not 6 consented to representation by Plaintiffs' Counsel. Cox I, however, has not reached the 7 class certification stage. Until the class is certified, the unnamed putative class members 8 are not clients of Plaintiffs' Counsel. See Sherman, 2015 WL 13542762 at *5 (“In short:
9 unless class counsel forms an independent attorney-client relationship with a putative 10 class member, putative class members are not clients before class certification.”); Kullar 11 v. Foot Locker Retail, Inc., 121 Cal. Rptr. 3d 353, 356 (Ct. App. 2011) (“[S]ince no class 12 has yet been certified in Echeverria II (and no class was ever certified in Echeverria I), 13 no attorney-client relationship has yet arisen between [the firm representing the named 14 plaintiffs in those suits] and the members of the putative class.”); Atari, Inc. v. Super. Ct., 15 212 Cal. Rptr. 773, 776 (Ct. App. 1985) (“We cannot accept the suggestion that a 16 potential (but as yet unapproached) class member should be deemed a party represented 17 by counsel even before the class is certified . . .” (internal quotation marks and omissions 18 omitted)). The Court will, of course, consider this potential conflict when addressing a 19 motion to appoint Plaintiffs' Counsel as class counsel in Cox I. See Yumul, 2010 WL 20 4352723 at *4 & n.9 (noting that it will consider “unethical conduct by plaintiff's 21 counsel” when the case reaches the classification phase). But for purposes of the instant 22 motion to disqualify, there is no conflict of interest with respect to unnamed members of 23 the putative class in Cox I.

24 While Plaintiffs overstate the evidence of gamesmanship involved in the instant 25 motion to disqualify, the Court cannot ignore the motion's timing. The conflict identified 26 by Ametek has existed since March 2017, when Plaintiffs' Counsel filed the Cox I 27 complaint, yet it was not until late November of 2017 that Ametek filed the motion to 28 disqualify. The disqualification motion was also filed six days after the Court denied

1 Ametek's request to be included in a motion to suspend the case management dates in the 2 this case. (ECF No. 129.) It was also filed eight days prior to the pre-trial motion 3 deadline. After Ametek filed the disqualification motion, it moved for a stay of 4 proceedings. (ECF No. 132.) While these circumstances do not prove that this motion 5 was brought as a delay tactic, the risk clearly exists. Finally, also relevant to this 6 analysis—but not necessarily suggesting gamesmanship by Ametek—is the fact that this 7 case was filed two and a half years ago. Disqualifying Plaintiffs' Counsel at this juncture 8 would cause significant delay in an already aging case.<sup>5</sup>

9 In light of the clear indication by the clients impacted by the potential conflict of 10 interest that they wish to be represented by Plaintiffs' Counsel, the age of this case, and 11 the risk that this motion was brought as a matter of tactical gamesmanship, the Court 12 finds that the totality of the circumstance weigh against disqualification.

13 IV. Motion for Sanctions

14 In their opposition memorandum, Plaintiffs assert that the Court should enter 15 sanctions under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11 against Ametek because the motion 16 to disqualify has “no legal or factual support,” and was brought “to harass or to cause 17 unnecessary delay.” (ECF No. 145 at 25.) The Court finds sanctions under these 18 circumstances unwarranted. The motion to disqualify filed by Ametek was far from 19 frivolous: it raised a viable claim that Plaintiffs' Counsel's concurrent representation of 20 the mobile home park residents and owners violates California's rules of professional 21 conduct. While there is evidence suggesting that Ametek's filing of this motion was 22 motivated at least in part by tactical gamesmanship, the Court does not find that Rule 11 23 sanctions are appropriate under the circumstances.

24 //

25
26 _____
27 <sup>5</sup> Because the Court denies the motion to disqualify on its merits, the Court need not address Plaintiffs' 28 argument that Ametek's counsel failed to satisfy any meet-and-confer requirements before filing the motion. (See ECF No. 145 at 7–12.)

1           V. Conclusion

2           For the reasons stated above, Ametek's motion to disqualify Baron & Budd and 3 Gomez Trial Attorneys as counsel for the plaintiffs in this case, as well as Trujillo, Cox I, 4 and Cox II, is DENIED. Plaintiffs' motion for sanctions is also DENIED.

5           The hearing scheduled for January 26, 2018, is hereby VACATED.

6           IT IS SO ORDERED.

7           Dated: January 24, 2018

8           Hon. Gonzalo P. Curiel
9           United States District Judge

10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28